KU SigEp kicks off capital campaign

The Alumni Board of Kansas Gamma is proud to announce the official kickoff of a capital campaign, KUSigEpNow! Money raised over the three to four-year fundraising period will be used to construct a new, 4,000+ square foot wing on the front of the existing chapter facility and to renovate rooms in the existing building.

The new rooms, located at the ends of two quiet halls, will be reserved for our members with the most seniority. The article "Housing Markets Change Rapidly for KU Students," below, explains more fully the need for this improvement to the KU SigEp house.

BY DWIGHT TETER '61, PRINCIPAL AT MANTEL/TETER ARCHITECTS IN KANSAS CITY

With a Campaign goal of $1.0 million, donor commitments totaling over $575,000 have already been received.

The plan calls for construction on the new wing to begin in spring 2007, with room renovations to take place through the summer of 2007, with completion for the fall 2007

Housing markets change rapidly for KU students

When each of us recalls many of our fondest college memories, there's a high probability that we think of the SigEp Chapter house at 1645 Tennessee. That facility has served the KS Gamma men beginning in 1949. Since then, with only two renovations, that house has seen over 2,000 young men pass through its welcoming red door.

For many of us, the chapter represents our first experience of living away from home and parents. For others, it became a home before or after military service.

However you arrived at the SigEp house, you most likely have memories that will remain with you for the balance of your life.

Bob Hopkins '58, says, "I had a great experience at the SigEp house on having that same kind of fun!"

In the last few years, Lawrence has seen an evolution take place in student housing. The traditional rooms at KU's dormitories and sleeping dorm-style accommodations at fraternities are a

Tennessee! We always had a really active group of members. We had guys involved in almost every activity on campus. We never had the best chapter house or the smartest guys, but we sure did have lots of fun. I hope the guys today are thing of the past. Today, most students arrive in Lawrence to find four-person suites in the dorms, apartments with individual rooms and common living areas, and older homes just east of campus fully remodeled and ready to house four to 12 friends. Competition is stiff, and can include limited free rent, free cable or wireless services, and amenities such as workout facilities, activity centers, and swimming pools.

"There are lots of options for living in Lawrence," says Brian Segebrecht '07, former chapter president. "Every semester. This is predicated on building sufficient cash balances prior to commencement of construction.

To address the issue of crowded conditions in small rooms, updating and renovating existing facilities, and constructing additional living space, the Alumni Board has retained Dwight Teter '61, principal at Mantel/Teter Architects in Kansas City. Dwight has developed a comprehensive plan (as seen in the rendering on page 1), to build a 20-man addition, new Chapter Lecture Room, and full basement addition on the northeast corner of the existing building. In addition, he proposes renovation of the existing interior areas including all sleeping rooms, the entry foyer, and the dining room, and construction of an additional large first floor resident bath.

"We're seeing this at many campuses," said Dwight. "We just did a two plus million renovation for the K-State chapter of SigEp. It is beautiful and allows them to compete more successfully with other living groups."

Each alumni member will receive a color brochure with more information on the Campaign, a FAQ briefing paper, and a donor commitment form. Those will be mailed around September 1.

"With our substantial alumni base available and engaged, achieving or exceeding the $1.0 million goal should be an easy move for us," states Bernie Becker, '74, Alumni Board President.

fraternity wants its guys to live in the chapter house three or four years, but the reality is that they become friends with their brothers, and choose to move to a place that offers them more features. We try to rely on the brotherhood connection, and the guys want to stay involved, but they just want a more spread out living environment."

Many fraternities have responded to this competition. In the last few years, the Sigma Chi, Phi Psi, DU, Phi Delt, and Delta Chi chapter houses have raised funds and completely renovated their facilities. A completely new chapter facility was built for SAE. The Lambda Chi and TKE chapters re-colonized on campus and moved into existing chapter houses, which they will be remodeling. This comes on top of renovations done several years ago by the Kappa Sig and Beta houses. Ranging from about $1 million to over $4.0 million, these Greek houses have responded to the need for improved and upgraded facilities.

Adam Poole, '09, had many options when moving from Wichita. "I was heavily rushed by the Beta's and the Phi Delt's, and both of them pushed the quality of their housing," he says. "I chose SigEp, after lots of thought, mainly because of the high quality of the guys, not the condition of the building. But, I think a lot of guys my age really want to have a nice place to call a home away from home. We lose out on some good men because of our house. We're just falling behind some."

"Our Greek community is really stepping up and making an investment in the future for their chapters," states Laura Bauer, KU's Greek advisor. "I can't recall exactly, but I think nearly all the men's groups have either recently done renovations, or are working on plans to do some kind of work. It's exciting for me because I see how strong Greek leaders tend to be and this reinforces the commitments of their alumni base to that leadership."

The KU SigEp chapter functions with a main chapter facility and two annexes, known as the Upper/Lower and as the South. The Upper/Lower is across the parking lot directly west of the main chapter house. The South is directly across 17th Street to the south. Both have served as overflow facilities for the main house. Even with that overflow capacity, we still have 3 man rooms in the main chapter house. In addition, all residents of the main house are served by one large bathroom upstairs. There are also two guest baths on the main floor.

"It's our responsibility as an Alumni Board to listen to the needs of our members and observe the housing market in Lawrence," says Tom Gray '77, Alumni Board member. "To continue to be competitive with all the options open to KU students for housing, we must constantly be alert to needed improvements."

As KU SigEp continues to strive for excellence in its 83rd year at KU, the Alumni Board is moving forward to expand and renovate the existing chapter house. Those improvements will continue to allow the chapter to create an atmosphere where each man can maximize his experience as a member and build on the Sound Mind/Sound Body principles of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Meet Your Pals at Hal's!

When Karl Ruppenthal '39 hears the words "Meet Your Pals at Hal's," memories come flooding back to him. Karl, and his brothers, operated Hal's Diner in a long gone building at 12th and Louisiana. They shared a room in Campus House (now where the Union parking garage sits).

"The diner paid us each $.25 per hour, and we were damned happy to get that!" says Karl, who started at KU in 1935 during the height of the Depression. Karl came to KU from Russell, KS, on a voice scholarship by band director, Russell Wiley.

"James Naismith '32, was my PE teacher. He married the SigEp housemom, Florence, you know. He was also one of the original founders of SigEp on the KU campus," says Karl. "At that time, the chapter had about 25 guys and we lived over in West Campus in a big, beautiful chapter house. We ended up losing it in WWII because there were so few guys who stayed home from the War." Karl finished his undergraduate degree in Spanish, and went on to attend KU Law School, graduating in the spring of 1941.

"We had a lot of fun at SigEp. But, we were always aware of the tension of the times. The War had started in Europe by 1939, so we knew we'd probably be in it. None of us knew what was going to happen, but we had fun waiting!" exclaims Karl.

With a keen interest in flying, Karl enlisted in a civilian pilot training course in Lawrence, one of six in the U.S., where he learned how to fly large, multi-engine, propeller-driven planes. During the War, he flew dozens of missions, shuttling secret cargo and people from South America to Cairo, where the goods and people were moved secretly into Europe. He also flew some very famous people.

THINGS HAVE CHANGED A LOT IN MY LIFETIME. BUT, I'M SURE OF ONE THING. THE BROTHERHOOD BUILT IN SIGEP HASN'T CHANGED MUCH.

"Once, my crew was assigned to fly Chiang Kai-shek and Madame Chiang Kai-shek back from a meeting with FDR. We had to fly them into Chungking, China. It was so foggy, we couldn't see the ground until we were a few feet above it. My co-pilot thought we were landing upside down!"

After the War's end, Karl returned to college, while still flying as a senior reserve captain for TWA. He earned a Master's in Industrial Relations from UCal-Berkeley, then went on to Stanford where he received his Ph.D. in Business Administration and was selected as the first Alfred P. Sloan Fellow. He served on the faculties of both schools and also spent 12 years at the University of British Columbia, where he taught and assisted the Canadian government in setting up its Transportation Ministry. He retired from UBC in 1984, and returned to the Bay Area.

After his first wife passed away, he met current wife, Jo, while singing in the church choir. Jo and Karl stay very active, still singing in the choir, gardening, reading, meeting friends, and enjoying their spectacular view of the San Francisco Bay.

"Things have changed a lot in my lifetime. But, I'm sure of one thing. The brotherhood built in SigEp hasn't changed much. I still have many, many fond memories of my time spent there. I hope all SigEps feel as good as I do about the Fraternity. It worked great for me!"

Choosing SigEp

BY MICHAEL GILLASPIE '09

When going to college, choosing where you will live is always an important decision. It can be a tough decision, especially at the University of Kansas, where there are so many options. It took me quite a bit of time to make my final decision, but I feel I made the best choice.

Like many freshmen not sure where they are going to live, I participated in Formal Recruitment, which gives a generalized, broad understanding of the Greek system and a small glimpse of what each fraternity on campus plans to offer you. After seeing all the different chapters on campus, I narrowed my choices down, with SigEp in the top three. Each house had its pros and cons; yet something stood out about SigEp that continues to make me glad that I chose to be part of the Kansas Gamma Chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Feeling the Friendliness

The quality that sold me on the house was the genuine friendliness of the guys here. Most certainly, other houses had a better outward appearance, but I knew there was something about this place that set it apart. In the conversations I had with the members of the chapter, the brothers focused on me and actually seemed interested in what I had to say. Every house tried to be nice and front a good image, but the brothers of SigEp created an aura of friendship that was appealing to me, especially coming from a small town to a school where I would know no one.

Striking a Perfect Balance

The size of SigEp provides a great base for friendship and brotherhood. The number of members isn't so big you can't get to know everyone, and it isn't so small that you lack privacy. I was always frustrated living in a small town. Everyone knew each other, and everyone knew each other's business. The number of brothers we have here allows for privacy, while keeping that brotherhood mentality of looking out for each other.

Testing the Waters

Another thing that seems to be different about SigEp is that we are encouraged to get involved, both within the chapter and on campus, as soon as we want to test the waters. I have been able to represent the SigEp as President of Junior Greek Council, a campus philanthropy organization for freshmen, take part in the Interfraternity Council, and still be able to help out in the community and work. The chapter doesn't take too much of your time, allowing room for other activities, yet it does provide opportunities to build friendships and yourself.

Embracing the ideals

The reinforcement of ideals is one of those things that will probably live with me past the experiences I have here at SigEp. I am encouraged to be diligent in all I do, and, most importantly, to help others, especially my brothers, friends, and family, better others and ourselves.

With all the other options I was given about living arrangements at the University of Kansas, and even though I could have gotten paid to go to college living somewhere else, living at the "Sigma" probably is one of the best decisions I will ever make!

KU SIGEP MEN IN INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL ON CAMPUS

KS Gammas earn scholarship recognition

At the Fall 2005 Scholarship Dinner, over $6,700 was awarded in academic scholarships. The Spring 2006 Scholarship dinner saw 33 men receive academic scholarship awards, including 5 with a 4.0 GPA, and a total of $7,150 awarded. Michael Gillaspie '09 was the recipient of the Tim Findley Outstanding New Member Award.

KU Chancellor praises SigEp Homecoming

Last fall, each Saturday morning when there was a home football game, a group of KU SigEp men organized and set up "camp" on the Hill outside Memorial Stadium for a weekly tailgate. Several alumni members kicked in some extra dough, and the men bought a tent top, which was used to help identify the location each week. In addition, these dedicated men cooked up some of the finest tailgate food you can imagine!

For Homecoming 2005, we hosted a large group of alumni and their friends and families under a large tent we rented from KU's Facilities Operations department.

KU Chancellor Robert Hemenway stopped by to view the action. He observed, "This is one of the largest gatherings I've seen this season for a tailgate on the Hill. How many people are here? I appreciate SigEp's efforts to get their alumni and friends to return and help us celebrate a big victory over Missouri."

Chancellor, our resident experts estimate that we entertained over 300 people that day. At a regular game day tailgate, we host anywhere from 50 to 100 people. Come by for any game this Fall! We'll see you there!
